Hi Eric,

New catalogs are being sent to you.

On page 207 of the 4th edition there is a 9/17/1776 36 Shilling note pictured. It is denoted as a counterfeit. There are no diagnostics listed in the counterfeits section of the appendices for this issue. Why do you believe this note to be counterfeit? Does it have the same diagnostics as the 12/7/1775 36 Shilling counterfeit? (vertical masts on the ship contained in the vignette). If this is the case, or if there are different diagnostics, they should be noted in the counterfeits section of the appendices.

*Have no further evidence.
 Shall I ~~check~~ check the CF on the 36s*

Stu

Dear Stu:

If you can easily obtain from your agent I would like an extra copy of the July 11 and July 12, 2006 Smythe catalogs. I asked Smythe for them before the sale and they said they would have used ones after the sale. My best. Eric

Dear Stu;

I appreciate you pointing out that I gave no detail on the CF 36s Mass, Sept. 17, 1776 bill. Long ago I accepted information from people, newspaper data or otherwise without seeing the image because it was so difficult for me to know whether or not such an item was really counterfeit I relied on the source. If you think it should be dropped I will do so. The source could have been wrong or I could have been wrong.

I also want to ask you if the Dec 17, 1776 Mass bill of 48s is CF as it is illustrated and I am marking CF next to the image. Do you have a genuine one?

I hope you acquired the Casileer.

Thanks.

Eric

Hi David,

I think that Dana's announcement of the New York 1781 $5 note is an important addition to the ongoing research of our early American paper money. It is exciting that there are still new discoveries to be made.

The allegorical cut on the reverse of this note, showing a rising sun (representing our nation), combined with the New York state motto, "excelsior" (ever upward) is a wonderful example of early American engraving art. Incidentally, it may have been one of the inspirations for the design of Brasher's Doubloon.

I'm sure that Eric Newman will include this note in the upcoming 5th edition of his work "The Early Paper Money of America".

Dear Mr. Levine,

My name is David Kranz and I work on Bank Note Reporter (just around the corner from Randy and George working on numismatic books here at KP).

Today I was talking to George and he mentioned a discovery by Dana Linett, a $5 from New York state's March 27, 1781, issue. I called Dana, and have images and some info for a story in Bank Note Reporter. I thought I'd also contact you to see if this discovery will be in the upcoming edition of Newman's "Early Paper Money of America" that you are working on, and to see what sort of comment you might have about the discovery.

Best -
